

Running to Fight Eosinophilic Disease

Betsy Petrovic has always been a fighter. In September 2011, she was diagnosed with Eosinophilic Disease and her life turned upside down. Struggling with the unrelenting pain of the disease while dealing with the stresses of life and being present for her two children under the age of two has been the battle of her life. But Betsy can't fight this one alone. An incredible support system keeps her encouraged and moving on a day-to-day basis, but she needs an even bigger support system to help her fight the war against this disease.

On June 3, 2012, Brittany Warner will run in Dexter-Ann Arbor Half Marathon to raise awareness for the disease. Joined with the CURED Foundation and your help, she can spread awareness for those who live with Eosinophilic disease. All proceeds will go to the CURED Foundation, a non-profit organization funding research for patients.
